SHEFFIELD INDEPENDENT, Monday, 10 Jan., 1927.

DRINK CHALLENGE TEA.
Blended to suit the water of the district by
NICHOLS & CO. (SHEFFIELD) LTD.

EXTRA EXPRESS EDITION.

Sheffield Independent

The Dominant Morning Newspaper in Yorkshire and the North Midlands.

22,547—Founded 1819 MONDAY, 10 JANUARY, 1927. C ONE PENNY.

FUNERAL EQUIPAGES
SUPERIOR
MOTOR HEARSES & CARS
With Horses or with Motor Hearse and Cars.
Joseph Tomlinson & Sons, Ltd.
BEDFORD STREET, SHEFFIELD.
Telephone: Central 172

POISON DRAMA IN A PEAKLAND CAVERN.

RAMBLER'S GRIM DISCOVERY.

MARRIED MAN AND YOUNG GIRL DEAD IN CAVE.

WINNATS MYSTERY.

THE WINNATS.

IN the dark depths of a cavern in the Winnats at Castleton, Derbyshire's famous beauty spot, the bodies of a man and a girl were found on Saturday night. They were identified yesterday as:

Harry Fallows (26), 28, Hinde street, Moston, Manchester;

Marjorie C. Stewart (17), 44, Hinde street, Moston, Manchester.

Bottles of poison were found in the cave. The man was married, and had one child, and was living apart from his wife.

EERIE SEARCH.

The discovery was made by Mr. Fred Bannister, a young Manchester rambler, of Upper Duke street, whose suspicions had been aroused by an incident he witnessed a week previously.

On Saturday, after enjoying a day's tramp on the bleak Kinder Scout, where only the keenest ramblers go at this time of the year, he was returning to Castleton in the gathering darkness, and while walking along down the Winnats, he decided to test his theory and visit the cave.

Climbing up the side of the steep gorge, well known to Sheffield people, he found an outer cavern merging into a narrow bottle neck. Aided by his flash-lamp, Mr. Bannister passed through the bottle neck and found himself in an inner cavern.

He stayed about for a moment, and flashed his lamp into the dark corners and eerie shadows of the silent cave.

Then he made a ghastly discovery. There, in a sitting position, was the body of a young woman, fully dressed and bearing no marks of violence or disorder. He touched her hand and found it quite cold. It took but a moment for him to ascertain that the woman was dead.

HORROR-STRICKEN.

Appalled and alarmed, Mr. Bannister rushed out of the cave, scrambled down the rocks, and dashed along the Winnats road into Castleton. He went straight to the police station, which is at the other side of the village, and informed Sergeant Barnett of his horrifying experience.

The sergeant sent for Doctor Baillie, of Castleton, and for three men, all of whom returned to the Winnats. Night had now fallen, but it was not long before the cavern of death was again explored.

Mr. Bannister pointed out the position of the woman. Beside the men had left his cavern, however, the gleams from their torches had revealed yet another tragedy.

Penetrating into a dark corner, the light fell on the body of a man lying prone on the cold floor of the cave, and about 15 yards from that of the girl.

The body was also fully clothed and appeared to bear no marks of violence. Near the body of the woman there was a second cup and saucer, and alongside it lay that of the man, a bottle still was found.

POTENT POISON.

It is assumed the fragments related to a bottle containing a potent poison, well known to chemists, called Aconitine, and the bottles were found with the same fluid. It is understood that a portion of the contents of the bottle found in the cave has been sent to Sheffield for analysis.

It is stated that Sheffield Independent has been informed that a bottle found in the cave contained a portion of the same poison, and that a second bottle, found in the pocket of the man, contained a larger quantity of poison. The contents of one bottle, he said, were sufficient to cause death.

It is particularly poison, known to chemists as deadly, but is considered within a few minutes.

IRKSOME TASK IN CAVE.

[illegible] engineer, after appearing in [illegible] in England, has now signed an agreement to perform in a music-hall [illegible] in Paris.

He announces to-day that he will [illegible] sing a song and dance the hesitation waltz. [illegible] he has not yet completed the [illegible] also declared that he has not abandoned the [illegible] although [illegible] on the afternoon of S[illegible]

[illegible] found [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]